BEFORE MIDNIGHT

INTRODUCTION BY ROBERT CRAIS

Before Midnight (Nero Wolfe #25) by Rex Stout

Rex Stout

Cheaters by no means prosper, yet Nero Wolfe encounters one Before Midnight (Nero Wolfe #25) that kills trying. on the Pour Amour fragrance riddle contest, 1000000 cash is going to the contestant who can solution 5 questions. anyone does not just like the warmth of competition, so he murders the competition founder and steals the solutions to the riddles. Now Wolfe has to smell down a path of clues that leads disturbingly on the subject of home.

Everyone's conversing in regards to the Pour Amour body spray contest . . . and the million money in prize cash that would be provided to the fortunate winners who can resolve the cosmetics-related riddles positioned out through the company. the competition has been a roaring success. The 5 finalists are assembled in big apple City, and the final 5 riddles were distributed. Everything's going swimmingly . . . until eventually the competition author lands up dead, and the record of solutions he had in his pocket is nowhere to be found. So the advertisements pros do what any kind of individual may do: they head immediately for the place of work of Nero Wolfe and lease him to determine who took the record of answers, and to discover how to unravel the contest. yet there is a catch: he has to complete the task sooner than hour of darkness on April 19th. Yet one other completely serviceable secret story. this actual quantity offers us a glimpse into Archie and Wolfe's deepest communicate principles (no direct lies), an ode to Saul Panzer, and Archie's concepts on mornings, in addition to a chance to watch Wolfe's humiliation and rage whilst anyone has the audacity to homicide one of many suspects in Wolfe's personal workplace (which has, i think been the scene of no fewer than part a dozen murders or tried murders over the years). In fact, he is so irate that he makes a decision to make certainly one of his infrequent (but now not unheard-of) tours open air the outdated brownstone. Heads will roll. Or at the least one, anyway. The contestants are really a hoot as well: the incomparably grotesque founding father of the Women's Nature League, a smugly enhanced (and unjustifiably despondent) heritage professor, an undernourished yet strangely self-possessed housewife, a sassy researcher with a phalanx of silent supporters, and a guy who appears like outdated King Cole. We see the entire usuals, of course: the phlegmatic Fritz; Inspector Cramer (and his sidekick Sergeant Stebbins); and helping P.I.'s Fred Durkin, Orrie Cather, or even invoice Gore. And we get to profit a bit whatever concerning the historical past of cosmetics--or at the least the ladies who used them. The tale is, perhaps, now not considered one of Stout's best, yet I nonetheless locate it hugely enjoyable. enthusiasts of Nero Wolfe might do good to take a look at this volume, notwithstanding i do not recognize that i'd suggest it to new readers. commence with a few Buried Caesar or loss of life of a Doxy as a substitute (though Too Many Cooks, Too Many Clients, and the mum Hunt also are excellent). [For these drawn to the audiobook edition, be warned: it is really a digitized model of an audio cassette recording, and dates from an age whilst audiobook narrators simply learn the book, rather than rather attempting to provide existence (and specified voices) to the characters. As a Before Midnight (Nero Wolfe #25) result, Michael Prichard's narration is a piece dry, and whereas there are sophisticated alterations among the characters' voices, it truly is like hearing a few man learn the book. there's no sparkle to the performance. In different words: Jim Dale he ain't.]
